Planting the Seeds of God’s Kingdom

In the First Reading, God rewards us for the good deeds we do for others in His name. Sometimes that reward comes in this life; other times in the afterlife. In this reading, a woman is very gracious to a man she recognized as a man of God. She never asked any favor of God or this prophet of His. In her offering of simple hospitality, she served the Lord. When the prophet inquired about her needs and discovered she had no children, he interceded for her on that unspoken need. Her faith and decency were rewarded. u The Responsorial psalm is an act of trust in God’s providence; a recognition that in Him alone we find our fulfillment; apart from Him, we’ll never find peace. In totally trusting God, we become dedicated to serving Him and our neighbor. We find our meaning for existence in this commitment. u In the Second Reading we see two sides of choosing Jesus. The “positive”: placing our hope and trust in God, the “negative”: ending our trust in worldly things. We die to the world that cannot bring us the peace and joy we seek. In dying to our slavery to passion and sin, we say no to the things that keep us from what is truly important. We do this at Baptism and daily in all our decisions. This gives us the freedom to choose God, and totally place our hearts in Him. u Today’s Gospel combines the two themes in today’s readings. In the First Reading we see there’s a price to pay in following Jesus, from sacrificing our comforts to sacrificing our view of reality. The second theme is God’s reward for those who faithfully, lovingly serve Him. We won’t all be missionaries, heroes or martyrs, but we can all be supportive of those in active ministry. We must never underestimate the importance of the small things done with great faith and love. They may not appear to be earthshattering, but we are quietly planting the seeds of God’s kingdom.
